NEW BUILDING

In tankers this week, Taizhou Wuzhou announced taking order for a firm 9,400 dwt Stainless Steel Chemical Tanker from Wuzhou Tongzhou Shipping, with delivery slated for 2024.

In the gas carrier market, Hyundai Mipo announced contracting a firm 22k CBM Handysize LPG Carrier from an unknown buyer, with delivery expected in 1H 2024.

In containers this week, Samsung announced orders for four firm 7,000 TEU Containerships from an unknown European owner. The vessels are all LNG Dual-fuel and delivery is expected within 2H 2024. CSSC Dalian Shanhaiguan announced taking orders for two firm 7,100 TEU Containerships from Asiatic Lloyd. These latest vessels will be delivered in 2024 bringing their series to six at the yard overall. Hyundai Mipo announced orders for four 2,800 TEU Containerships from an unknown owner. The vessels will all have an LNG Ready class notation and deliveries will run from 2H 20023 through to March 2024.

RECYCLING

The lack of tonnage and increasing commodity/steel markets are pushing price levels towards the heady heights last seen in 2008. Spectacular improvements in indications are reportedly being tabled this week although we are waiting to hear of the first sale to be reported in excess of USD 700/ldt. Maybe, a private unit has been concluded which will come to light soon but there certainly is continued optimism from within the recycling industry that these firmer rates will be sustained.

Owners of tanker units continue to refrain from circulating their tonnage (or withdraw previously workable candidates) from this sector due primarily to the anticipated upturn in the tanker charter rates following the ongoing conflict in Ukraine. Our thoughts are obviously with the innocent people that have been caught up in this horrendous situation and hope that a peaceful resolution will be found soon.

Generally, the demand for tonnage from the recycling yards is outweighing the supply adding fuel to the speculation that the market is set to remain hot for the foreseeable future.
