Recycling

Scanty!

Despite slight falls this week with the local steel markets in India, offers from buyers for any available tonnage has seen an increase this week, most likely as recyclers look to fill their yards with any available tonnage. The sparce tonnage currently being experienced is certainly aiding these improvements as the domestic recyclers become frustrated, having to look out over their empty yards.

There have been reports that some of the recyclers remain happy to sit on the sidelines, believing the speculation of a large volume of container tonnage ready to hit their destination, however, whilst yes, we will see these volumes increase, analysts suggest there is still much time, even next year, until the change in pattern is witnessed and container operators offload their aging tonnage in abundance.

At a general meeting arranged by the Ship Recycling Industries Association of India (SRIA) recently, a new resolution was collectively approved which stated that ship recyclers must not accept any new MOA terms by which "huge amount of money can be claimed by sellers against the recycler for any accidents/defamation and other situations including loss of reputation during operational procedure.". And following this, the 'SRIA' will forward, at some time, their own standard contract terms on which they require their members to use. How this will operate remains to be seen but it does appear the domestic recyclers are looking for a situation to minimise their own risks.

Meantime, looking to their counterparts, Bangladesh remains quiet with no real purchasing interest at this current time, and Pakistan, who have shown renewed activity over recent weeks, may slow down their purchasing campaign as the majority of recyclers who had Letter of Credit facilities appear to have tonnage in hand and will have to wait before bidding further as the availability of U.S. Dollars in the country remains limited.
